BLACK WAS THE INK

In BLACK WAS THE INK, sixteen-year-old Malcolm is sent on a fantastical journey through Reconstruction-era America with the help of a ghostly ancestor, while working in the present day to save his family's farm in Mississippi from being claimed by the State. After a harrowing interaction with the police at a local D.C. park, Malcolm is angry and despondent and feels like nothing good ever happens for teens like him. All he wants is to be left alone in his room for the summer to draw or play video games—but no such luck. With growing violence in his neighborhood, his mother ships him off to his father's family farm in Mississippi, and Malcolm is anything but pleased.

A few days after his arrival, his great-aunt tells him that the State is acquiring the farm to widen a highway. It's not news Malcolm is concerned about, but someone plans to make it his concern. One minute Malcolm is drawing in the farmhouse attic, and the next, he's looking through the eyes of his ancestor Cedric Johnson at an America radically transformed by the Civil War.

As Cedric, Malcolm meets the real-life Black statesmen who fought for change during the Reconstruction era: Hiram Revels, Robert Smalls, and other leaders who made American history. But even after witnessing their bravery, Malcolm's faith in his own future remains shaky, particularly since he knows that the gains these statesmen made were almost immediately stripped away. If those great men couldn't wholly succeed, why should he even try? Malcolm must decide which path to take. Can Cedric's experiences help him construct a better future? Or will he resign himself to resentments and defeat?

Perfect for today's youth activists who are making their hopes for the future known as they battle frontline issues of 2021, Black Was the Ink is a powerful coming-of-age story and an eye-opening exploration of an era that continues to define modern America.

Michelle Coles is a debut novelist, experienced civil rights attorney, and mother of four. For the past decade, she served as a career civil rights attorney at the U.S. Department of Justice. As a 9th generation Louisianan, she is highly attuned to the struggles African Americans have faced in overcoming the legacy of slavery and the periods of government-sanctioned discrimination that followed. She is a proud alumna of Howard University School of Law and the University of Virginia. Her goal in writing is to empower young people by educating them about history and giving them the tools to shape their destiny. She lives in Maryland with her family.
